

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Photographic conditions of a plurality of retinal images photographed in one photographing routine are recorded in relation to the photographed images, respectively. Any image is selected from the plurality of images as a reference image, and using the photographic condition of the reference image as a reference, a correction is made so that other images are expressed as images equivalent to an image photographed under the photographic condition of the reference image.